THE INDEX

ILLINOIS STATE NORMAL UNIVERSITY
NORMAL, ILLINOIS

Preface

Normal University is too old to be collegiate, but too young to be venerable. The traditional frivolity of the campus life is reluctantly making way for the machine of modern education. This INDEX contents itself with recording the seventy-third year of colorful undergraduate life.

Dedication

In appreciation of that great philosopher, Plato, who stated, "A good education consists in giving to the body and to the soul all the beauty and all the perfection of which they are capable," this, the fortieth volume, the Index of 1930 is respectfully dedicated.

In Memoriam

Our Captain has fallen. His brave fight against the grim reaper has ended. We are beginning to comprehend our loss. The spirit and mind of David Felmley has been a dominating force in this institution for forty years. For thirty years he was its president. Carlyle was right. Nations and institutions are very largely the shadows of a few great minds. This institution is a material representation of the mind of David Felmley directed toward the training of teachers.

As we think of his various qualities, his wonderful versatility, his breadth of mind, his depth of learning, the accuracy of his scholarship, the broad scope of his interests, his capacity for labor, his indomitable will, and undaunted courage, his clearness of vision, his loftiness of ideals, his fundamental kindliness and tolerance, his unfailing support for all worthy causes, we feel that he has left a stamp upon this institution which will remain for many years. The admirable qualities that marked him as a leader in any group of educators do not go with him to the grave. They live in the memories, in the hearts and minds of those who loved him and who will devotedly strive to preserve and pass on to future generations all those principles and ideals which were nearest his heart. Surely it shall be true of him that "His echoes roll from soul to soul, And grow, forever, and forever."

In Memoriam

Alice Jean Patterson

On June 13, 1929, Alice Jean Patterson closed her eyes on the world she had loved and had taught others to love and appreciate. Her illness was sudden and short. At the peak of her achievements, just as she was about to gather the rich fruitage of her labors, the end came.

As teacher of Nature Study, as writer of many books, as president of the National Society for Nature Study, Miss Patterson enriched unnumbered lives. She gave complete devotion to her chosen work. She lived in it and loved it. She imbued her students with a like devotion.

Miss Patterson lives on in the world of nature to whose revealing she gave her life. The bursting of buds, the gay cheer of many blossoms, the familiar song of returning birds proclaim her immortality. As many another brave spirit has walked familiar paths even though life's day was over, so Alice Jean Patterson moves among all growing things on our campus still bidding us to open our eyes to the wonders of the world about us.

HOMECOMING

HOMECOMING

This homecoming was one never to be forgotten by any of us who were present. The most outstanding feature was the lighting of the dome of the old Main Building. This was a very beautiful sight and could be seen for miles around.

Eddie Bill, one of our old grads, gave our homecoming wide publicity by using his position for our benefit, and broadcasting announcements of Old Normal's ninth annual homecoming over U. S. A.

Everything was ideal for the entire program. Saturday was one of those ideal October days, almost too warm for football, but entirely satisfactory for watching the parade and talking to homecomers.

The program of events was opened Friday night with the presentation of the homecoming play, Tommy. At the same time a homecoming party was sponsored at the Felmley Gymnasium. Saturday night both the play and the party were repeated for the benefit of those who were unable to attend Friday night.

HOMECOMING

The next big event occurred Saturday morning, in the form of the Hobo Parade. There never was such a crowd of bums before. Incidentally the Woman's Debate Club won first prize with their stunt, entitled "Hobo Heaven." Virginia Good and Josephine McClure won the individual stunt award.

Later that morning the Varsity-Alumni hockey game became the center of interest.

A tour of the Science Building was very much enjoyed by the old grads.

Of course the big event of the afternoon was the football game between Carbondale and Old Normal. Normal lost by a six to nothing count.

Breakfast, luncheon, and dinner gave opportunity to clubs to meet and greet old members. Almost every club on the campus held such an event at some time and place.

Sunday morning was a rather tired time for most of us and we began thinking of getting back to our places of business.

WOMEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATING

The Women's Debate Squad concluded its 1929-30 season by tying with Shurtleff for the Women's Debate Championship of the Little Nineteen Conference, having participated in nine debates in all. The season was opened with two non-decision debates with Wesleyan and later Normal and Eureka met in two non-decision conflicts.

The first conference debate was a dual one with Bradley, in which both Normal teams were victorious. The negative team met and defeated North Central's affirmative but in the second half of the dual struggle, held a short time later, Normal's affirmative team was defeated 2 to 1 by North Central's negative in a hotly-contested argument. This total of the three victories and one defeat tied I. S. N. U. with Shurtleff for the championship.

Perhaps the most interesting debate of the season was the one held before the Bloomington Forum in which the two Normal teams met in their only joint public appearance of the year.

Cleda Nitzel, Mildred Isenhower, and Alice Peterson were the affirmative debaters, while Dena McMackin, Dorothy Ellis and Margaret Hiatt comprised the negative team. Much of the squad's success is due to the excellent coaching of Dr. Fred S. Sorrenson and Prof. John A. Kinneman.

The members of the women's Debate Squad who represented I. S. N. U. at the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention at Wichita, were Dorothy Ellis and Mildred Isenhower. They debated the question, "Resolved, that the nations should adopt a policy of complete disarmament, excepting such forces as are needed for police purposes."

*D. Ellis, D. McMackin, M. Heitt
C. Nitzel, M. Isenhower, A. Peterson*

MEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE DEBATING

The men's intercollegiate debate question for this year was, Resolved: That the Nations of the World should Adopt a Policy of Disarmament. Old Normal was successful in winning the championship of the Little Nineteen Conference, also the Normal School Championship. The squad met every afternoon the eighth hour in Philadelphia Hall, to work out the brief and discuss possible points for the debates that followed.

The affirmative team was composed of Thomas Barton, first speaker, Atwood Reynolds, second speaker, and Abel Hanson, third speaker and captain. The negative team was composed of Edward Buehrig, first speaker, Frank Vernor, second speaker and John Burlend, third speaker and captain.

The negative team lost one decision, this being to North Central College at Naperville. The affirmative team did not lose a decision the whole season.

Dr. Fred S. Sorrenson and Professor R. G. Browne deserve much credit for the success of the two teams because of the time and effort they spent with the teams.

LIVINGSTON CUP CONTEST

The annual Livingston Cup Contest for extempore speaking was held in general assembly, Wednesday morning, March 5. The general topic for discussion was "Crime and Law Enforcement." The five sub-topics chosen for the contest were:

1. Prohibition and Law Enforcement.
2. Politics and Crime.
3. Court Procedure and Crime.
4. Modification of Law.
5. Police and Crime.

The topics were chosen twenty-four hours before the contest. Each contestant drew two topics and was allowed to choose one of the two. By a curious coincident all three contestants drew the same subtopics and each selected to discuss "Court Procedure and Crime." Clarence Blair spoke first followed by John Burlend and Atwood Reynolds closed the contest.

The cup was awarded to John Burlend who represented I. S. N. U. at the Inter-Normal contest with DeKalb and Macomb, where he won second place.

A. Reynolds, J. Burlend, C. Blair

EDWARD'S MEDAL CONTEST

The twenty-seventh annual Edward's Medal Contest was held in Capen Auditorium on Saturday evening, March 1, 1930. The gold medals were won by Clarence Miller, in Reading, and by Abel Hanson, in Oration. Mr. Miller won the medal awarded in the Oration Contest last year, and his victory in the reading division this year marks the first time in the history of the contest that one person has received the two medals.

The contestants in reading and their selections were:

"The Finger of God"-----Clarence Miller
 "The Money Spider"-----Geneva Odle
 "Ashes of Roses"-----Cleda Nitzel

The contestants in oratory and their orations were:

"Our Nation's Bewilderment"-----Atwood Reynolds
 "The Answer"-----Ruth Walker
 "The Battles of Peace"-----Abel Hanson

The winners were entitled to represent Illinois State Normal University in the State Oratorical Contest of Teachers' Colleges, which was held this year in Capen Auditorium, March 28, 1930. Both Mr. Miller and Mr. Hanson were victorious, defeating the Macomb and DeKalb representatives, bringing two State Championships to "Old Normal."

Mr. Hanson also competed in the Inter-State Oratorical Contest at DeKalb, April 25, 1930. He brought further honor to the school when he succeeded in winning third place among contestants from five states.

THE GENIUS LOCI

By Nellie Davis

"One-two-three-four-five-six-seven-eight," tolls the tower clock of Old Main. A straggler here and there rushes wildly to his eight o'clock class, then quiet reigns over the campus. A smile seems to come to the face of the old clock as, bending a benevolent look downward, he sees what makes him glad: many busy students in many classrooms; enthusiastic instructors; the quiet hum of a professionally interested school.

The routine of the day proceeds: Classes dismiss; students go hither and thither; occasionally a happy laugh or a gay remark is wafted up to him; noon, with its hurry and temporary cessation of work; dusk, with its languid steps; night, and its peaceful quiet on a beautiful campus and beautiful buildings.

Keeping watch over his proteges, the old clock is forever at his task. Like a sentinel at his post he keeps watch over the trust that for two-thirds of century has been entrusted to his care. While the whole world sleeps he is forever at his task, tolling out the hours and half-hours; hovering like a spirit over the place.

Thus day on day, month on month, year on year, he has held supreme sway over the school. Spirits seem to lurk round his form and indeed to invade the whole of Old Main; to spread over the entire campus.

Varied have been the days of his something like seventy years, and varied they will continue to be for seventy more. Gradually have more buildings been added to his care, and now in the addition of another new one he takes on more pride and dignity, towering over all in the supremacy of antiquity.

All the traditions clinging around institutions of the school, and all the memories of happy days spent at I. S. N. U. will surely flash to a student's mind on a chance display of a picture of the Old Tower Clock. He might well be termed the symbol of the spirit of this school.

He is the friend of all. He has witnessed tragedies. He has smiled on successes. He has welcomed new-comers. He has bidden graduates farewell with a last reverberating stroke of the hour. He has beheld a process in development: the education of an individual, of an enlightened age.

When time shall have heaped years and years more of memories and traditions on his head, when he shall have witnessed new eras of learning, when there are different conceptions of life and living, and civilization shall have reached a more developed stage—then when tolling out his "one-two-three-four-five-six-seven-eight," he will seem to say "I am still the Genius Loci."

LOST—ONE NOTEBOOK

By Vernon R. Fox

Bud Lewis was very busy. The coach had been placing numerous new basketball formations on the board, and Bud's copying in his little red notebook had been slightly retarded by the appearance of a cute little blonde, who was passing by the gym window. But now the plays were completely copied and the notebook was filled with many intricate lines and crosses that were to be the deciding facts in the big game with Wesleyan. Now skull practice was over.

Bud rushed out of the gym, carefully stubbed his toe on an imaginary straw as he passed a "bunch of femmes," and soon was trotting down the street with the fair one.

"Well," said Bud to Mary, "We are about to attempt an almost unknown feat—beat Wesleyan—and I don't mind telling you that practically all of the basketball secrets of the ages are carefully tabulated in this little notebook." Bud removed the book from his pocket and with an air of profound secrecy pushed back the outstretched hand.

"But, Bud, you know I wouldn't tell a soul," cooed Mary teasingly.

"Get thee behind me, Satan," orated Bud. "Neither the fairest hand nor the foulest shall ever touch my precious little red notebook, for this very night I am to absorb its contents and revel in their depths of meaning."

Night came and Bud, true to his convictions, sat down to his study table to learn his plays. His study did not last long, however, for no sooner had he sat down than the door-bell clanged. The landlady opened the door, and upstairs bounced an excited Wesleyan pledge. Upon recognizing his caller, Bud sidled over to the closet and placed the precious book in his school trousers. The pledge, who was very much perturbed exclaimed, "Bud, I have just thirty minutes to count the windows on the Main Building. Do you suppose you have a picture handy that I could get an estimate from?"

"I'll get a yearbook," replied the agreeable Bud, and downstairs he flew. Finally finding the book among a week's accumulation of dailies he returned upstairs to find the frosh anxiously pacing the floor.

The windows were quickly counted and Bud, already tired by his mental labor, trotted down to the Station Store with the hurrying pledge.

The following night Bud, stinging mildly from some coach-like remarks, decided to look over his little notebook. Reaching in his hip-pocket, he felt for it, but it wasn't there. A quick but futile search followed—the notebook was gone. Where?

Bud began to think. "That lousy pledge," groaned Bud. "Of all the nerve!"

The next day Bud's woebegone face soon gave him away, and by night the whole team had heard of the disaster. The plays couldn't be changed, for tomorrow night was the game. Things had to be left the way they were and chances taken.

The night of the game arrived all too soon for Bud, and he jerked on his good suit in a rather rough fashion. Arriving at the gym, he found a disconsolate group of players.

"Did you find that darned book?" growled Bob.

"No chance," whispered the unfortunate.

Slowly pulling off his clothes, Bud mentally tabulated Wesleyan's scores. Two—four—five—seven—eight—. "Oh, what's the use?" sighed Bud. He heaved his trousers at the locker, but—the jar was too much, and out slid that priceless red notebook.

"And it all came from my mother insisting on those extra trousers with this suit," chuckled Bud as the team gathered around.

"You know what the finding of that book means," cried Bob

If you want to be sure of the score, don't ask a Wesleyan friend.

THE DUSTER SPEAKS

By Abel Hanson

I can remember a time in the not so distant past, when I thought that the very acme of human existence was to be the editor of a humorous column in a newspaper. I devoured "The Line," "Cook-Coos," and all other similar journalistic contrivenings with all of the eagerness of a starved mongrel pup in a meat shop. I spent hours thinking up fictitious "wisecracks," which, in my fancy, I published in my phantom column. In my fervid imagination I pictured my friends and acquaintances passing subtle compliments about my keen sense of humor, and I saw the rabble rocked into side-splitting hysterics over witticisms which I emitted with all the ease and grace of a Mark Twain.

In truth I had perched myself on an imaginary pedestal of popularity, the equal of which no one had ever seen. But, alas!—I have learned that no such dream-heaven can exist in reality. I have learned the truth of that old axiom, "The joy of anticipation is greater than that of realization."

It is not that I am dissatisfied with "The Dust Pan" or the response it gets in cynical sneers, blunt criticisms, or sickly laughs. There is a more dire aspect to the situation which is responsible for changing me into a semi-maniac.

It all came about in this way:

A few weeks ago there was a woeful dearth of witticisms for publication, so I reluctantly appealed to the student body for anecdotes and limericks to fill out the columns of "The Dust Pan."

At first, I was thrilled with the response. In corridor, classroom, and on the street I was beset with sure-fire suggestions, each contributor coyly implying that his name be published with the joke. I laughed freely and blithely at the first nine hundred and seventy-three, but at a thousand I had to force a laugh for the sake of courtesy. At twelve hundred the laugh had subsided to a sickly grin, which at times must have resembled a snarl. By the time one thousand four hundred twenty-three had been reached I was bored to desperation.

On the occasion of the one thousand five hundred sixty-seventh contribution, my room-mate approached me with this: "I pulled a good one in class today——"

Something snapped in my head. I saw red. I don't remember what I hit him with, but I felt his skull give way. Armed with a cleaver I dashed madly about town maiming fifty-four students, six business men, and two professors before I was finally shot down by an armed posse.

The court sentenced me to solitary confinement for life, having waived the death sentence because of an extensive psych-analytic testimony showing me to be afflicted with dementia precox.

But I am strangely self-satisfied as I sit here in my cell with its narrow barren walls and barred door, for I can ply my wandering pen at my humorous ravings and enjoy them silently, without being bothered by a pestiferous pack of publicity-seeking pool-los. I shall be quite content to live in this manner, on and on, into oblivion.

DOES THE LABORER LABOR?

A STUDENT'S COMPLAINT

By Geronimo Mayhem

The laborer casting out clods from a pit, while in the frame of mind induced by the cold dampness of sweat unabsorbed by the air in those confined quarters, by the caked clay on shoes and clothing, by the calloused palms and the aching back, the laborer, as I say, if these circumstances should chance to be borne in upon his mind, might be tempted to compare his lot with that of other men in other fields. Since human beings are more or less inclined to take blessings for granted and to feel the adverse phases of life with an undue emphasis, in such a comparison the workman undoubtedly would set side by side in his mind all the unfavorable aspects of his position and the real or imagined advantages in that of the envied person, rather than placing together the advantages of each or the disadvantages of each. In seeking for a particularly easy type of existence with which to contrast the difficulties of his own and thus to derive a greater degree of satisfaction from the mood, the discontented workman to whom we have referred in all likelihood would light upon the college student as most suitable for the purpose. In so doing he would grievously err.

The laborer bearing his hod of bricks aloft, or dislodging chunks of black, combustible rock with a pick, or—to continue the former example—separating recalcitrant clods from the main mass by means of a spade, does so with entire freedom of spirit and mind. As he climbs the ladder, swings the pick, or heaves the spade, he is not thinking about bricks, or coal, or mud. What he is thinking about I am not prepared to say, but that it isn't any of these I am certain. Workers of this type enjoy pure liberty of soul for the reason that their activity has no immediate, vital purpose. There is no urgent, undeniable force whipping them on with a mental lash. The miner may lean on his pick, the digger on his spade (if the overseer is not about) with perfect nonchalance. Such pauses do not delay the completion of their work, for that is never completed; there is always more coal to be mined and more earth to be dug. Since their labor has no ending, nothing momentous can depend upon its completion, an obvious conclusion but mentioned for the sake of effect.

It is chiefly in this point that the work of the student differs from that of the laborer. Of course, the distinction does not hold absolutely, but, nevertheless, the difference exists as the principal one. Some one, no doubt, could be found who would be able to point out benefits to be derived from the performance of a task under the relentless goading of mental force, responsibility, conscience, or whatever it is that drives college students on to continued intellectual effort in spite of every remonstrance of reason, protest of body, or inclination of desire; but most of those who speak from experience will agree with me that it is deadening. A definite limit of time has been set up, and in that space the student must express (I use the word in its literal sense of "squeeze out") from his brain some creation of fancy. College students have no experiences to draw upon since all their time has been spent in acquiring an education, and consequently they must rely upon imagination. Such a task might be an actual pleasure if the time to be spent upon it were unlimited, but as it is, every interesting diversion of thought along allied paths must be promptly suppressed, else the thing could not be finished. The mind must be held a blank, and a strenuous, hypnotic effort steadily exerted in order to force the proper ideas into being and then transcribe them upon paper, half-baked. If the ideas do not come, they must be waited for and encouraged by every possible means. The student cannot leave the matter until it is finished, or until he is suddenly and rudely awakened by the noise resulting from his falling asleep and out of his chair at the same time. Then the jarring he has received renders him totally unable to continue.

When the laborer returns home after the day's toil, his mind is at peace (as it has been all day). Physical weariness but serves to deepen his contentment. The student, however, is never free from the burden of responsibility; even his slumbers are troubled by its encroachments. When one assignment has been completed, another is in the immediate offing. He does not feel the pleasant relief which comes from a task well done, for by that time he is insensible to all emotion. No, if the momentarily dissatisfied laborer of whom mention has been made could be put in the college student's place, no long period of time would elapse before said laborer returned joyfully to his former occupations.

JACOB TILMAN

By Henry Holmes Smith

Jacob Tilman batted the bedroom door-curtain aside and lurched into the shabby dining room. He sucked his unlit stinking pipe. He'd been told not to light it. He stamped away from the bedroom doorway. The curtain swung feebly after him. Then it sagged back once more into the doorway. The curtain was a woman's sleazy nightgown.

Jacob Tilman stamped along toward the back door. At every jar the kerosene lamp on the dinner table rattled. An old bible cowered under the lamp. The floor creaked. Jacob Tilman liked the noises. They helped him think. Hard work thinkin'. He pounded on.

The doctor had kicked him out of the other room. Told him stinkin' tobacco smoke wouldn't help asthma any. Said his smokin' hadn't either cured Dimmy the other times.

Well, he hadn't done anything else for Dimmy the other times she'd been sick. He'd just set in the bedroom smokin'. The smoke made her cough. Done her good too. Sure. Every time before she'd finally stopped wheezin'. Mighta did it this time too, but Dimmy wouldn't wait.

Jacob Tilman looked up. He'd reached the back door. He jerked the knob. The door squawked open. Jacob Tilman lurched into the yard. The door banged shut.

It was cloudy outside. The sky looked dull and strained, as though it were sick. A splotch of verdigris edged in sickly red made the west sky ugly. The sun had set hurriedly, ashamed of the mess it had made.

Jacob Tilman sat down on the lard tub at the well. Maybe now he could light his pipe. He scraped a match on the tub. It rasped along the greasy wood, then burst into flame. Scrapy like Dimmy's voice when she was wheezin'. Funny voice anyway. He lit his pipe.

Jacob Tilman puffed on his stinking pipe. The tobacco sizzed in the pipe-bowl. A curl of smoke spread listlessly in the sultry air. He looked at the sky. Gettin' cloudier. Been drippy for a week. Funny how Dimmy got asthma when it rained in the fall. Lucky she didn't get sick when it rained in the spring. She was good help at spring plantin'.

He puffed on the stinking pipe. The smoke tasted good. So did Dimmy's food. Dimmy was a good cook. Worth a doctor bill. Wouldn't have called a doctor, though, if Dimmy hadn't been so stubborn. Last week she'd told him to call a vet'in-ery for the cow. He hadn't. The cow had died. So he'd called a doctor for Dimmy when she told him to. Oughtn't to let Dimmy die. Dimmy was worth more'n a cow. Still you don't have to buy wives. Maybe she was worth a doctor bill anyways. Still you don't have to buy wives. Well, anyways he'd got a cheap doctor.

Dimmy would've wanted a more expensive guy. She never had any money-brains. Prob'ly wheezed 'em all away a long time ago. Wanted him to build a bedroom door this fall. Said it was drafty in the bedroom. Doors cost money. Couldn't afford no doors. So she'd hung an old nightgown in the doorway. Always puttin' somethin' somewheres in the way. Didn't help none either. All wore out and full of holes.

He drew on the stinking pipe. The tobacco smoke was good. If he ever got sick, he'd sure have his pipe! Funny idea, him ever gettin' sick. Especially ever havin' asthma. Where'd it come from, that idea? He chuckled deep down in a barrel-chest. The tobacco sizzled as it burned.

He puffed again on the pipe. Smoke oozed from the bowl. The burning tobacco sizzled. Hard work thinkin' about things. Dimmy must be havin' it hard too. Tryin' to breathe. Oughta be in there smokin' for Dimmy. That'd make her cough. Make her gasp. Be good for her. Make her well. This crazy doctor didn't know much. Wouldn't let him make her well. Then she could pray again. Dimmy liked to pray. She prayed every night. That is, every night when she was well.

Couldn't pray now she was sick. That always worried her. Once she'd tried it. He'd laughed at her scrappy voice tryin' to pray. Her face had looked funny too, like it hurt her to pray. He'd told her that God prob'ly laughed at her too. He prob'ly did.

Jacob Tilman puffed on his stinking pipe. It didn't sizz. Maybe the tobacco was out. He took the pipe out of his mouth. Hard to see in the dusk. He peered into the pipe-bowl. There was nothing but ashes. Ashes and smell. He knocked the ashes out. From an ancient pouch he took a mite of tobacco. He started to rub it in his palm.

The back door moaned. Jacob Tilman looked up. The doctor was comin' out.

Jacob Tilman didn't get up off the lard tub. The doctor approached slowly. Hard to see him in the dark.

"Her heart," said the doctor, "she's dead."

Jacob Tilman rolled the bit of tobacco into a ball.

"Might as well not've called ya."

He filled his stinking pipe.

SAM'S PROPOSAL

By Clyde F. Dawson

"How's tricks?"

It was Austin Trilly who spoke. He had stopped his team as Sam Hartly approached.

"Oh, about as usual," Sam brought his glossy blacks to a stand.

"How are you liking threshing?"

"About as I always do."

"It isn't so bad."

"If you can ride the box wagon."

"One can't work too hard and run around nights."

Sam colored slightly. So that was it?

"That's true."

"How are you and the girl getting along?"

"So-so, I guess. I really don't know how a couple like us are supposed to get along."

"You haven't had much experience?"

"Scarcely none."

"Women are a question."

"It seems that way."

"I used to go with Flora."

"So I've understood."

"She's a real fine girl."

"That's what I've always thought."

"By the way are you engaged?"

Sam blushed.

"You're getting personal."

"You'll pardon me, I'm sure."

"Certainly."

"Well?"

"We're not engaged."

"You haven't had the courage?"

"Not exactly that. Though I guess I do lack that—somewhat."

"I managed to propose."

Sam tossed a few oats about in the wagon box.

"With what result?"

"I—never went back."

"A cold refusal?"

Austin toyed with his whip a while.

"Not exactly that."

"Well?"

It was Sam's turn to be insistent.

"Would you believe me if I told you?"

"I don't know. We've always been rather good friends."

"Well—she—that is to say—deliberately—anyhow she laughed."

Austin found it difficult to express his thought.

"And you never went back."

"I, perhaps, was a little too quick. But I could never just find the desire to return."

Sam toyed with another handful of oats.

"I hope that you'll accept what I've said in the spirit that it was meant," Austin said, continuing the conversation.

"Thanks."

Silence again.

"Well I must be going," Austin again resumed the conversation. "I hope we haven't discommoded the threshing by our visiting."

"Our horses needed a rest."

"Remember, forewarned is forearmed."

Austin drove on.

"So that was it," Sam thought as he started his team. "I often wondered—and I really intend to propose—today is Wednesday—this evening—by gracious, I shall propose this very day!"

Sam was tired when he knocked at the door of Deacon Jones' residence. Things had gone wrong all evening. When he returned home from threshing, the cows were out. They had to be brought back and the fence had to be mended. The pigs were getting the cholera. One was dead and had to be burned. His mother wasn't well. So Sam was completely out of humor. Yet he had decided to propose.

"Come in."

It was Flora. She was an ordinary girl—but well bred. That is Sam had always thought that she was well bred. It had always been a relaxation for him to be in her presence. But she had laughed at Austin or at least that's what he said. Had he stooped to an untruth? Would she laugh at him?

Sam was soon in a big plush chair with Flora opposite on the davenport. Sam was shy. However, with the assistance of a post card album and a book or two, he managed to maneuver to her side. Just about the time that he had called forth all of his courage, he heard voices in the sitting room which was next to the parlor where they, Flora and he, were about to pledge their mutual—and then the door opened. It was a surprise party.

He endured it. He never knew how. At last—they were gone. He had decided to propose that very evening.

Flora was on the davenport and he was in the plush chair just where they had been two hours before. He was dead tired. Yet he had decided to propose.

No use to appeal to the album and books this time. How in the world was he going to accomplish it? Finally, in desperation, he deliberately walked to the davenport. He went as a soldier to battle—or a criminal to the gallows—so slowly and so painfully. He thought that he never would get there. He didn't see the startled look flicker across Flora's face. He didn't notice her shudder. The fact is he was unconscious of anything except—he was going to propose.

He slumped onto the davenport like a ton of wet sand released from a steam shovel. Flora was the sphinx itself.

"Flora," he said and then almost choked. Large drops of sweat stood out on his forehead. It seemed as if he had forgotten to wipe his hands after a wash.

Finally "Flora," as he knew no defeat, "We've been going together quite a while."

He grasped her hand and almost wrenched her arm from the socket.

"I thought that it was time that I—"

Flora bounded up and, with a war whoop, dropped into the plush chair. She was laughing almost hysterically.

Sam swore. He managed to avoid both smut and Deity but he used nearly every other known form and he swore audibly, distinctly.

"That's what Austin—"

He paused. Flora became as white as snow but silent. The sound of bed room slippers was heard in the sitting room. Again the door opened and Deacon Jones appeared in his bath robe.

"What's going on in here?"

It was the voice of Moses speaking from Sinai itself. And Sam—was a criminal of the worst kind—but a paralyzed one evidently.

Flora had stirred. Yes, she really was speaking. Sam scarcely heard.

"Oh Daddy," she said, "Congratulate us."

Moses too had turned to stone.

"You see Daddy," Flora managed to continue, "Sam has proposed and—and—I have accepted. I didn't mean to ridicule him but, oh, you should have seen him!"

Sam never knew exactly what happened afterwards. He had faint recollections of the grip of a warm hand—the touch of small lips and—somehow or other he was home again. He had proposed.

THE THREE WISHES

By Katharine Turner

Last night as I was lying curled up snug and warm in bed, I was suddenly awakened from a reverie of dreams by a brilliant flash of lightning, a terrific blast of thunder, and the beating of rain on the roof. I turned over to the wall, pulled the woolen blanket up under my chin, burrowed my ears deep down into the pillow, and let my eyes and thoughts wander freely. Suddenly as I was lying there staring at the wall in a kind of doze, I saw gradually emerging from the door of the little Japanese summer house painted upon the wall-paper, partially illuminated by rays of light from the street lamp outside, a kind of grayish blot oozing upward and outward and assuming a kind of human form. I watched it, pondering all the time. Just before going to bed I had finished reading a book about a poor boy who had made good. He had possessed more than the average amount of ability. Then there were others who became famous because of their wealth. The story had set fire to my ambition. Could I ever become famous? What good qualities did I have and what did I lack that is part and parcel of those who succeed?

I brought my eyes back to the Japanese summer house from the distance to which they had wandered while still being outwardly fixed on the same spot. The swinging of the street lamp caused shadows to flit back and forth across the picture on the wall-paper. Yes, the blot was still there. I even imagined I saw eyes and nose and a whimsical little smile on a miniature mouth in the corner where the shadows lay thickest. As I peered into those shadowy eyes, the mouth opened and a gentle voice said, "And so you, like all the rest of the people in the world, want to make a name for yourself?"

I received the question calmly and replied in the same calm voice. I had reached a stage where nothing astonished me.

"I thought as much," the blot replied, "and decided to help you along the way. I have three wishes for you."

"Oh," said I to the blot, "so you're my good fairy? I never believed much in fairies and consequently didn't recognize you at first."

"Yes, I'm everyone's good fairy," the blot answered, "only most folk don't see me as a blot. They have more belief than you. I am a beautiful white gauzy thing to them with a silver wand and a sparkling crown. I shan't take offense, though. I have learned tolerance. But coming back to the wishes. You must think long and deeply. Your fate lies on your choice. If you wish to be famous, now is your chance."

"That's very kind of you," said I. "Won't you be seated while I am thinking over my wishes?"

"Thank you so much," the blot replied as it settled down on the roof of the Japanese summer house. "I'll tell you some experiences I have had with less thoughtful people than yourself. Some folks will throw their opportunities to the four winds, won't they? Well, a while back I came upon Mr. Micawber, his dear Mrs. Micawber, Master Wilkins Micawber, Esquire, Junior and all the rest of that admirable family as they were getting off the boat in Australia. My heart melted at sight of them just as it did when I came across you; so I offered three wishes to our friend. He didn't need to be asked twice. Without a second's hesitation he answered, 'My dear sir, I am wishing first of all for something to turn up.'

"'Fine,' said I, 'and what next?' This was harder. He pondered for a few minutes and then said, 'If I am to have the good fortune to control three wishes, I shall give my second one to wishing that henceforth I and my family may steer clear of the shoals of ever incurring pecuniary liabilities which we are unable to liquidate.'

"'Finé, again' said I, 'and now for your third.'

"This time he turned toward the ocean, looked longingly out in the direction of England, and said, 'And last of all I wish that my friend Copperfield and myself might "run about the braes and pu' the gowans fine" as in the good old days.'

"So much for this fine fellow. He is now happily stationed as chief magistrate at Port Middlebay running, in his imagination, over the Australian fields picking daisies with Copperfield."

The blot or fairy or whatever it was flicked its ear in great self-satisfaction and asked me if I would like to hear another personal experience. I was lying back on the pillows trying to decide what I could wish for which would show me to be a wiser person than Micawber, but I had presence of mind enough to tell it to go on and to listen with half an ear.

"Sometime before I met Micawber," the blot continued in its soothing voice, "I was traveling across Italy when I stopped at a fine estate for the night. And whom should I meet there but Portia, and on the very day before young Bassanio was to make his choice of caskets. You can imagine how warmly she and Nerissa greeted me on the threshold. She was awfully eager, and up and asked me for three wishes before I set foot in the house. I understood how she felt, though, for even fairies were young once, so I sat down and listened patiently. Her wishes were phrased somewhat as follows, 'Oh, fairy, I wish with all my heart that my Lord Bassanio may choose the casket wherein my image lies; I wish that he and I may live a long life together; and oh, fairy, I wish that love may never cease to flow between me and my Lord Bassanio!' And you know how that story ended," the blot finished.

I nodded as I heard the blot chuckle. I was still in a very reflective mood. Only three wishes with which to gain the things necessary for fame! I was treading on hallowed ground. Perhaps the blot had better tell me more stories before I named my wishes. The blot readily agreed, and I was soon listening to the wishes of the beautiful Cleopatra.

"Cleopatra was in a pretty sorrowful state when I reached Egypt that time," said the blot. "Caesar had just about ruined her. I thought wishes might help her out of her trouble, but she failed to make the most of her opportunities, just like all the rest. Her wishes were almost pleas. 'Oh, give me another sleep that I may see my emperor Anthony; and soften Caesar's heart that he may give me conquered Egypt for my son; and then let me taste of death'."

I was still lying back on the pillows staring and reflecting, and listening with a half an ear as the blot finished telling its third story. I couldn't make up my mind. I must make my fame by my wishes, so I pleaded for more time.

"Surely, I'll give you more time," the blot said. "I have many tales to tell. What do you suppose that rascally Huck Finn wished for when I happened on him sleeping down among the hogsheds? He made about the most sensible wishes yet, according to my way of thinking. He said, 'First of all, I wish that I may get to be a reg'lar ripper of a bandit, with everybody talking about me, and proud they snaked me in out of the wet; and second of all, I wish to live the rest of my born days in old clothes and barrels along with my pipe, far away from all the widder's ways; and third of all I wish that me and Tom may never get split up no matter what happens.'

"Are you ready now with all your wishes?" the blot demanded.

"Yes," said I, "I think I'm ready to risk it. But I can't wish with you in that state of mind. I'm serious whether those people you've been telling me about were serious or not. My very happiness is at stake. Can you make your feelings more in sympathy with mine?"

I judged the blot could because the joking corners of its shadowy mouth straightened into a hard line and its laughing eyes took on a solemn appearance. I remember how I had longed for fame. It was the thing which would make life worth while. My heart rose up into my throat as I made my wishes.

"First," said I, "I wish for the knowledge of Plato and Aristotle brought up to date." The blot swallowed in its shadowy throat as if that were a bitter pill.

"Secondly," I said, "I wish for the wealth of Croesus." The blot swayed to and fro as if hit by the might of a tornado blast.

"Lastly," said I, "I wish for the health of some Thyrsis or Thestylis, country-bred with fresh air in his lungs, simple food in his stomach, and iron in his muscles." The blot wavered as though sick unto death and asked faintly as it began to ooze back into the door of the Japanese summer house, "And what would you do with these?"

"With these," said I, "I would hold the world in my hand."

"Fool," squeaked the blot as it faded from view, "know you not that you have wished the impossible?"

THE TOCSIN OF REVOLT

By John Burlend

Comrades!

The time has come when the students of the world must turn from their present course and strike a new line of march if they would avoid decay and oblivion. The time for revolt is at hand! Half-way measures cannot suffice; nothing but immediate and drastic measures can save us from the infamy of slavery. Ground as we are between the heel of academic authority and the stone of civic injustice, we must make our choice between bondage and insurrection. The spirit of the student has been progressively crushed by the weighty hand of oppression.

Look at our own campus! How many times have the police reserves been called upon to battle students intent upon raiding some usurious merchant? When have brickbats and cobble stones filled the air as students attempted to rescue some comrade fallen into the hands of the police? What student has made himself liable to arrest? Has it ever been necessary to disperse students throwing dice in the auditorium before general assembly? Has the faculty ever found it necessary to eject drunken students from their classrooms? Never! The student of today is so oppressed that he ventures no liberties. His spirit is crushed by inactivity.

Look at the action of our two societies, Philadelphia and Wrightonia. Have any heads been broken in battles waged by the members of these organizations in the corridors of "Old Main"? Do individual members of the societies fear to go abroad at night because of the danger of encountering a gang of their rivals? No! The only battle that the two societies have is a word war. Once a year they meet peacefully to see which society has a tenor who can hit a high C with better grace. The rest of the evening is spent in talking while only a few yards away are streets paved with brick that might be put to a better purpose.

And notice the way in which students amuse themselves today. Sunday mornings are spent in hitting a little white ball with a crooked stick! Sunday evening is spent in looking at pictures! The days of the week are spent in the classroom! It has come to such a state that a student cannot even leave school for a week without being penalized by the college authorities. So weak has student spirit become that they actually invite the faculty to attend their dances!

We are indeed come upon bad times. No longer do either the faculty or the police live in dread of the force of the student. Time was when university days were happy days of gaming, rioting, and drinking. Time was when the faculty rejoiced when two mobs of students fought, since they themselves were then safe for the time being. Time was when the police resisted the students only when they were attacked. But today we wear the yoke of heavy bondage without a murmur, and bow with humility under the weight of oppression.

It is time that the student regain his lost position and sit again upon the throne usurped by the faculty. The spirit of Villon is not dead but slumbers only. Last year the students of Des Moines arose in successful insurrection. The tocsin of revolt has been sounded! Students, arise!

THE CALL OF THE JOB

Oh, the call of a job is in my ear,
 A call that is loud and long,
 And I long to apply where the wages are high
 And the income flows along.
 Oh, I long to find a job of my kind,
 Where the school day ends at noon,
 Where the pupils are few and there's little to do
 And they pay through the month of June.
 Oh, the call of a job is a mighty call,
 But a job is hard to find,
 And I'd have you know that wages are low
 And school boards most unkind.
 For a paltry pelf I will sell myself
 And even the things I say.
 For my miserly hire I'll sing in the choir
 And teach eight classes a day.

—John Burlend.

I WANT TO WALK ALONG

I want to walk along the flowing river,
 Along the flowing river till I die.
 I always want to feel
 The rushes where I steal
 Swaying backward and forward
 To the sighing and the crying
 Of the wind in the sycamores high.

I want to walk along the flowing river,
 Along the flowing river till I die.
 I want to feel the thrill
 Of ripple and of rill
 Flowing onward and outward
 To the sea and to the sky.

I want to walk along the flowing river,
 Along the flowing river till I die.
 I want to breathe the smell
 Of the greenstuff in the dell
 Drawing freshness and vigor
 From the coolness of the river
 Flowing always and ever gently by.

I want to walk along the flowing river,
 Along the flowing river till I die.
 I want to sing a song
 As my body swings along
 To the crooning of the runes
 Sung by winds in old time tunes.
 Playing through the leaves and branches 'gainst the sky.

Oh, I want to sing a song
 As I swiftly stride along
 Full of freshness and of freedom
 Of the open country air,
 Of the woodlands and the farmlands,
 Of the rivers and the marshes,
 Of the birds that fly so high
 Silhouetted on the sky;
 Oh, I want to walk along the flowing river,
 Along the flowing river till I die.

OUR COACHES

Clifford E. Horton

When Coach Horton took the duties of Athletic Director, athletics were at a low ebb. Since that time they have come forward with a renewed effort. The teams show fine co-operation, good spirit, and good coaching. Coach Horton also brought with him the slogan "athletics for all." Intra-murals have developed to high point, rarely seen in colleges of this size. To you, Coach Horton, we are with you in everything you do in order to bring fame and honor to Old Normal.

Coach Cogdal came to Old Normal little known. Since he has been head coach, the teams have shown a great development in both coaching and "fighting" spirit. The teams under Coach Cogdal are knocking on the door for conference championships. The basketball team of this year was rated one of the best in the conference. Coach Cogdal, we thank you for bringing a victory from our neighbors on the south, the first time in nearly a decade. We wish you much success in producing "better and greater" teams for Old Normal next year.

Joseph T. Cogdal

ATHLETIC BOARD OF CONTROL

The members of the 1930 Athletic Board of Control from the faculty were C. E. Horton, C. W. Huddleson, W. A. T. Beyer, C. A. Harper, and J. T. Cogdal; from the student body: E. T. Hill, Senior; H. Seybert, Junior; E. G. Madis, Sophomore; Melvin Nichol, Freshman, and J. T. Mooney, Freshman.

At the first meeting of the Athletic Board of Control the following officers were elected: E. L. Hill, Secretary; H. Seybert, Treasurer. Mr. Horton, Director of Athletics, is chairman of the board and presides at all meetings. Meetings are held on the second Tuesday of every month.

The Athletic Board is the governing power behind Normal athletics. The duty of the Athletic Board is to approve of the athletic schedules, eligibility of athletes, expenditures, awarding of official "N's" and sweaters, and to appoint the managers for all major sports.

GAMMA PHI

The Illinois Alpha Chapter of Gamma Phi was installed at Illinois State Normal University during the winter term of 1930. Gamma Phi is a Physical Education Fraternity maintaining a very high standard for membership qualification.

The objectives of Gamma Phi are: to promote the interest of physical education among the students of the University, to honor gymnastic excellence in the individual members of the student body and faculty of the University by election to membership.

Gamma Phi is under the direct supervision of the Head Director of Physical Education.

Gamma Phi has sponsored during the year several physical education demonstrations in neighboring high schools. Gamma Phi was also responsible for the ushering and other menial tasks during the local district tournament. The Boxing and Wrestling Tournament held in the Spring term was directed by Gamma Phi.

C. E. Horton, our Physical Education Director, deserves a great deal of credit for the enthusiastic manner in which he has helped to establish and promote the welfare of the organization.

THE "N" CLUB

Four years ago, in the spring of '27, a group of "N" men of Old Normal banded together and organized the "N" Club. Knowing the need for such an organization on every campus, they began working to fill the school with the idea—"Athletics for the good it does us, physically and mentally." Their aims were these:

- (1) To promote good fellowship among the varsity athletes.
- (2) To obtain higher education among varsity men.
- (3) To improve the morale of the students generally.

Since the time of the "N" Club's organization we have seen Normal's athletics grow in strength and extent, we have seen that the members of the Varsity teams are striving to play by the sportsmanship code, and we have seen the student body and faculty back our teams with all they had when these teams really needed backing.

We are not conspicuous as an organization, it is true, but we believe that we are slowly accomplishing our aims. Here's to a bigger and stronger "N" Club.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

CHARLESTON, 34; I. S. N. U., 0

Inexperience of our men cost us our opening game of the season on Felmley field to the tune of 33-0.

ST. VIATOR, 0; I. S. N. U., 0

We journeyed to St. Viator and upset the old dope bucket by holding the fighting "Irish" to a scoreless tie. It was our first experience at a night game and was played in a driving rain.

CARBONDALE, 6, I. S. N. U., 0
(HOMECOMING)

Before a large homecoming crowd Old Normal went down to defeat, 6-0. A long pass in the first quarter netted the only score of the game, which proved too great a handicap to overcome.

EUREKA, 6; I. S. N. U., 6

Eureka's highly touted team was held to a six-six tie. Eureka scored in the first quarter but Old Normal came back strong in the last half to tie the score. A long pass from "Tiny" Moore to his brother, Roy, gave us our score.

MACOMB, 12; I. S. N. U., 6

Old Normal scored her only touchdown in the first half when McFadden carried the ball over. Macomb came back strong and scored two touchdowns in the second half to beat us 12-6.

DE KALB, 12; I. S. N. U., 6

De Kalb came with an undefeated team and left the same way. Normal led at the half 6-0, but De Kalb came back and scored two touchdowns in the third quarter to put the game on ice.

McKENDREE, 19; I. S. N. U., 6

After traveling all day we played McKendree Bearcats at night. We lost this game by the score of 19 to 0. Mostly due to the "wonderful" officials that worked the game.

WESLEYAN, 30; I. S. N. U., 6

Wesleyan beat us but they knew they had been through a battle when the game was over. Wesleyan scored 23 points in the first half but Old Normal literally tore them apart in the second half holding them to a single touchdown, while we scored one ourselves on a pass from Tiny to Art Hill.

BASKETBALL

Captain "Bob" Traughber

The "Redbirds" passed through the most successful season in the last decade. "Bob" Traughber was named captain at the annual basketball banquet. The Varsity team was composed of "Bob" Traughber, "Bob" Rowe and "Tiny" Moore forwards, "Mose" Moore center, "Red" Darling and Harry Caldwell guards. Horace Clark, Harold Swartzbaugh, Everett Haag, "Alex" Wade, and Ray Copeland made up the reserve team.

The "Redbirds" did not lose a home game. They won from Wesleyan on the home court by a score of 24-21, the first time in nearly a decade. They placed second in the Third Annual Normal School Tournament held at DeKalb, being defeated by Carbondale for the championship.

The "Redbirds" were regarded as one of the strongest teams in the conference, and with only Captain Traughber graduating they should be exceptionally strong again next year.

Capt. Everett Ryan

The "Redbirds" enjoyed an unusually good season. With Aiello, Bryan, Rowe, Mulera, Ryan and Reynolds, Coach Horton had a fine nucleus from which to build a winning team. Although Co-captain George Key failed to return to school thus leaving the "hot corner" open, Reynolds was shifted from his old position at short stop to third base so as to fill the gap left open by Key. The new men to show their "stuff" so as to become regulars were: Jimmie Johnson, outfield, Louis McFadden, shortstop, Edward Webber, outfield, Edson White, outfield, Holland Seybert, pitcher, June Van Gundy, pitcher, John Shiner, pitcher, and Millard Anduson, infield.

With the opening of the mid-spring term found Dennis Leonard ready to alternate behind the "log" with Aiello. Also it brought J. E. Sullivan, a southpaw, to help strengthen the pitching staff. Probably of all the games played the one that will remain the longest in our minds is the North Central game. That wild eighth inning rally when the "Redbirds" came to bat trailing 10 to 5. When the smoke had cleared the "Redbirds" had pushed seventeen runs across the plate, and it took one hour and ten minutes for North Central to retire the side.

The success of the team is largely due to Coach Horton and the fine cooperation given him by Captain Everett Ryan and the squad.

TRACK

Captain Burton Carlock

Prospects for a successful year in track looked good with the returning of eleven letter men and a number of other men who had been on the squad.

The team should be exceptionally strong in the track events but somewhat weak in the field from the lack of weight men.

The Freshmen class also shows promising material in Jimmie Johnson, the Springfield colored flash, L. Johnson and L. Fricke in the distances, Mitts—"Mel" Nichol—P. Johnson in the middle distances, Mattix in the 220 and hurdles, and Roop in the broad jump and 10.0 Murray Wallace in the two mile.

The letter men returning are Capt. Carlock (dashes, discus and broad jump), ex-Capt. Hill and Graack in the 880 and mile, Traughber in the two mile, Steel'smith in the pole vault and high jump, Copeland and East in the javelin, Marvin Nichol in the 440 and Adams and Jeckel in the hurdles.

There are some thirty-five men out working for a place on the track team, pointing for the State Normal School meet to be held at Charleston.

CROSS COUNTRY TRACK

Last Fall cross country track was introduced as a major sport at I. S. N. U. At the first meeting George Graack was elected Captain and given charge of the men. The squad was composed of Graack, Fricke, Johnson, McVicker, "Mel" Nichol, Marvin Nichol, Adams and Holman. The first four men won their letters.

The Red Birds met the Titans on Homecoming at Normal and lost by a small score due to the fact that several of the men were not in condition. On Bradley's Homecoming the pedagogues again lost 34 to 21. This was the lowest score made against the Indians in three years. On Nov. 9th the Normalites again met the Titans and won 16 to 20 after a close race.

The Teachers placed fifth in the State Meet held at Peoria, Nov. 23. The Tech men won their fifth consecutive championship.

M. Nichols, L. Johnson, G. Graack, L. Fricke, M. Nichols

TENNIS

The 1930 tennis team was composed of the following men: Paul Kambly, Captain, Dorrence Darling, Don Wardell and Harry Coursey. In this district meet held at Decatur, Paul Kambly and Dorrence Darling won the right to compete in the state meet at Peoria, May 23rd and 24th. Harry Coursey and Don Wardell failed to place either in the singles or doubles. Normal's tennis hopes go with Kambly and Darling to the state meet. Paul Kambly will graduate in June. Paul has been tennis captain for three years. His loss will be felt keenly since he has been a consistent winner.

Schedule—

April 25—Illinois College 6—State Normal 0.

April 30—Illinois Wesleyan 6—State Normal 0.

May 9-10—District Meet at Decatur. Doubles won by Kambly and Darling.

May 23-24—State meet at Peoria.

May 28—Eureka College.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION CLUB

The Physical Education Club began the year under the capable leadership of its new president, Lillian Chambers. At its first meeting the club planned to give each evening over to those problems of physical education which were not presented in regular courses.

Beatrice Baird inaugurated the new plan with her proposed intramural program. Bernice Sorg followed with a talk upon "Summer Camps." Miss Barto, club sponsor, spent one evening discussing some games especially fitted for leisure time or for those unable to participate in the more vigorous sports. An interesting evening was spent in watching a demonstration on arrow-making given by Ruth Parrish.

Besides improving our knowledge in the different phases of physical education, we have also been quite social. Between the Freshmen entertaining the Sophomores and the Sophomores the Freshmen, and the whole club sponsoring a very pleasant evening for the physical education girls and boys, we feel that our social side has not been neglected.

The Physical Education Club feels that it owes much of its success, in developing into a worth-while and dependable organization, to its sponsor, Miss Margaret Barto. Every member who will begin her career as a teacher next year will carry with her memories and ideals of the club and its work.

Honorary Award

Miss Barto

W. A. A.

W. A. A. has had a marked growth this year in both membership and interest shown in the organization.

W. A. A.'s annual Hare and Hound Chase took place early in the Fall term and, as usual, all of the Freshmen felt welcome to the organization after attending the chase. At the weiner roast which followed, the following heads of sports were elected for the Fall term: Hockey, Beatrice Baird; Soccer, Marjorie Wilson; Hiking, Lillian Chambers; Swimming, Ethel Bill; Dancing, Louise Sullivan.

Homecoming was celebrated by the annual hockey game, the Alumnae versus the Varsity, and the Homecoming banquet. W. A. A. also participated in the Hobo Parade.

In November, W. A. A. was sorry to accept the resignation of its president, Aileen Browning. Gladys Healy, the vice-president, took over the duties of leadership and directed W. A. A. through the remainder of the year successfully.

November 22, W. A. A. entertained the girls of the school with a Boy and Girl Party in the McCormack gymnasium. The popularity of this type of party is shown by the fact that the same kind was repeated in the Spring term.

The heads of sports for the Winter term included the following: Clogging, Bernice Sorg; Bowling, Betty Baird; Swimming, Claudine Shepherd; Volley Ball, Roberta Halley; Hiking, Lillian Chambers; Basketball, Kathleen Jarrett.

W. A. A. has joined in the trend towards Intra-Mural Athletics since both Basketball and Volleyball were conducted on that plan this year. At the end of the basketball tournament, in which many girls participated, a bountiful spread was enjoyed.

At the All-Sports banquet, Clara Kepner, Verna Mae Thomassen, Kathleen Jarrett, Gladys Healy and Lillian Chambers were given "N's" for their achievement towards being a "good sport" during the year.

The Spring term sports were headed by Marjorie Wilson in Archery; Svea Mickelson, in Baseball; Bernice Sorg, Tennis; Clara Lewis, Hiking; Joie Mann, Swimming and Lillian Chambers, Horseshoes.

W. A. A. feels proud to have won first place in the Varsity Stunt Show, thus receiving the cup for one year. It hopes to again be victorious next year so that the cup may be its permanent possession.

W. A. A.'s highest award, the Bronze Tablet, will be awarded at the outing at Camp Lantz, May 23-24. The members are looking forward to this occasion with much pleasure.

W. A. A. now has a room of its own for which it has bought a rug and other furnishings.

The officers who have helped W. A. A. prosper in 1929-30 are: President, Gladys Healy; Vice-President, Aileen Browning; Treasurer, Verna Mae Thomassen; Recording Secretary, Cleda Nitzel; Corresponding Secretary, Elinor Johnson; Social Chairman, Dorothea Coleman and Head of Intra-Mural Athletics, Beatrice Baird.

W. A. A. owes a great deal to the members of the Physical Education Department for their cooperation throughout the year and especially to Miss Field, its sponsor.

ORCHESIS

Miss Lakin

Orchesis, honorary dancing society, began its third year under the direction of Miss Emma Lakin. Through self-expression and interpretation members of the society have been able to grow in natural ability and in music appreciation.

The outstanding achievement of the society was its second annual recital in which all members participated. The program was divided into three parts. Part one presented a most interesting dance in "Figures of Earth" describing the cosmic humor of life. In part two were several nature poems, which took the place of music and which were read by Miss Mabel Allen. One of the main features of the program was the three-act dramatization, "The Little Princess Who Could Not Dance," given in part three. These annual recitals which are given by the organization, bring forth the aims and ideals which Orchesis desires to express.

"Don Quixote," Cervante's story, adapted by the festival class, was the central theme of the spring festival which was given as a part of the commencement program. The spring festival has become an annual affair at I. S. N. U. and for the past ten years some very successful ones have been staged.

"Don Quixote" told the story of that noble, but eccentric knight of Cervante's tale. His heroic endeavors, mistakes, and illusions succeeded in making him a lovable character. The cast was composed of Orchesis members and the girls of the Freshman dancing classes. The university orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Kenyon S. Fletcher, furnished the music for the dances.

Orchesis has been growing well and rapidly. With this year's worth-while presentations, it has established itself firmly among organizations of high standards. Under the leadership of its sponsor, Miss Lakin, and its president, Miss Aileen Browning, Orchesis has enjoyed a most successful year.

VIDETTE

The Vidette came out at the end of the year 1929-30 a more successful paper so far as national and state recognition go than ever before. The outstanding honor of the year was the winning of the gold medal for taking first prize in the teachers' college division of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. The Vidette was also awarded a first class honor rating by the National Scholastic Press Association sponsored by the University of Minnesota. This is next to the highest rating which college papers can receive from that association.

Then, too, the Vidette finished well at the top of the papers entered in the Illinois College Press Association contest held at Wesleyan, May 10.

The editor, Katharine Turner, set a precedent by being the first editor to have had the course in journalism taught here. Much of the success of the paper may be laid to the help of Miss Esther Vinson, faculty sponsor. The associate and assistant editors, Bernalillp Williams and Edward Buehrig, the feature and column writers, Annabelle Thomson, Rosie Rasmussen, and Abel Hanson, together with the sports writers, Campbell Miller and William Wilson, directed by the sports editor Thomas Barger, Jr.—all contributed to the success the paper achieved. The business side was ably handled by Professor A. R. Williams and Horace Clark.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE

The Women's League of I. S. N. U. has had a very active and successful year.

The League continued the practice of the "Big Sister" movement again this year. This is an aid to girl students who are coming to Normal for the first time.

A general meeting of the Women's League was held in October and at that time the organization of the League, its purpose, and its meaning were explained to the girls. At this same meeting district presidents and secretaries were elected.

Several of our League were delegates to the State League of Women Voters, which was held in Evanston in November.

The league joined the Y. W. C. A. in providing a Christmas tree and a Christmas music program during the week before Christmas vacation.

The citizenship committee constitutes the College League of Women Voters. This is an organization which furnishes an opportunity for the girls in school to meet and discuss current topics. Governmental events of local, state, national, or international interests are discussed by members of the group and an opportunity is given for free discussion. Although this organization was formed last year it has grown rapidly and a large group of the girls in school have taken an active interest.

*R. Parrish, L. McKinley, M. Ross, M. Sale, R. Rasmussen

Our social committee furnished several successful parties and dances throughout the year. They were:

Tea—With Home Economics Club in Fell Hall.

Sport Dance—In Felmley Gymnasium.

All Girl Dance—In Felmley Gymnasium.

Formal Dance—In Fell Hall.

The League sponsored the Forum Program which was addressed by out-of-town and local speakers.

VARSITY CLUB

The Varsity Club is an organization of the men of I. S. N. U. It is sponsored each year by the Dean of Men, Mr. R. H. Linkins. The purpose of the club is to promote a sense of good-fellowship among the men students of the campus and in a general way to make the institution a bigger and better I. S. N. U. It desires to provide a wholesome setting for the social and moral welfare of its members to make the school spirit of the University the most wholesome and attractive for the students, and to promote the best form of athletics at the Illinois State Normal University.

The club takes an active part in the social affairs on the campus. Among the more outstanding social activities this year which were sponsored by the club are the Christmas service, and the Mother's Day service. Some of the best dances held on the campus were sponsored by the Varsity Club. An active part is taken in the Hobo Parade at Homecoming. The club has been instrumental in selecting speakers for the men's conference assemblies. A definite attempt is made to cooperate with the other organizations of the campus in carrying out their plans for campus activities.

Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. began its year of service by holding open house at the rooms on North street on the second Wednesday of the fall term. The following Saturday the Walkout breakfast was held. This is an annual affair and is always attended by a large group of girls.

On Sunday morning, during Homecoming, the Y. W. C. A. held a sunrise service in Capen Auditorium. The entire school was invited to the service.

In November the formal recognition service was held in Fell Hall. It was a beautiful candle light service at which many new girls were received into the association. The organization considered it a privilege to have as speaker at this service, Mrs. Lida Brown McMurray, who was responsible for the prayer circle which met in November, 1872, and from which grew the first student Y. W. C. A.

At Christmas time a tree was placed in Miss Barton's office at the foot of which each member left a gift to be sent to the Baby Fold. A Christmas gift of fruit was also sent to this institution.

During the Spring term a banquet was held at the Bloomington Y. W. C. A., at which time the new officers for next year were installed.

Membership in the Y. W. C. A. is open to any woman in school who makes the following declaration: "I am in sympathy with the purpose of the Association, and it is my purpose to live as a true follower of the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Bright thy story, Philadelphia." Indeed, her story this year is brighter than ever. The course of events was largely determined by the first meeting of the year. Former, active and loyal Philadelphians responded with a hearty "Here" when roll was called. The year was started with vim, vigor, and good cheer that Philadelphia has always shown and always will show.

One of the first notable events of the year was the Christmas program. Through the co-operation of all members a very effective and commendable service was presented to a large audience in Phil Hall. Mrs. Katherine Welsh was director of the pageant. Wilbur Reece and Rudolph Schwartz assisted greatly—Wilbur as handy man and Rudolph as choir leader.

The peak of her success, however, we reached on the evening of January 31, when the Phil-Wright contest was won for the sixth time by Philadelphia with a score of five to two. The contest was one of the best in history and this fact only added to the joy of winning. The contestants representing Philadelphia were: Abel Hanson, John Mooney, debate; Atwood Reynolds, oratory; Gertrude Bockwitz, extempore; Clarence Hiller, reading; Alice McBride, vocalist; Virginia Seibert, pianist.

J. Mooney, M. Hiatt, A. Peterson

This victory merely started the "ball rolling." In other literary events on the campus, Philadelphia was well represented. The Edwards Medal Contest was won by two Phils: Abel Hanson, oratory; Clarence Miller, reading. The same young men represented I. S. N. U. in the State Teachers College Contest and were again victorious.

Three of our members, Margaret Hiatt, Atwood Reynolds and Abel Hanson, were delegates at the Pi Kappa Delta Convention held at Wichita, Kansas.

Another faithful and able Phil, Katherine Turner, won third place in the World Peace Essay Contest.

On March 15 at Rolands' Tea Room the annual banquet was held. Many alumni members were present. Interesting talks were given by Mr. Maurice Graff and Abel Hanson. Two of the contestants, Alice McBride and Virginia Seibert, favored with musical numbers. Phil songs were sung by the group under the direction of Rudolph Schwartz. Clarence Miller presented the victory banner to the society and Mr. Palmer accepted it in behalf of the society. Rudolph Schwartz, in behalf of the members, expressed the appreciation of the efforts of our worthy sponsor, Mr. Palmer, and presented him with a gift (book-ends and a book, "John Brown's Body") in acknowledgment of our gratitude.

Professor and Mrs. Palmer entertained the society in their home on April 7. Special numbers were given by members and an evening of entertainment followed.

"Forward, forward, Philadelphia,
Time and tide may fail;
But our hearts will love thee ever.
Philadelphia hail."

Hail to the purple!

Hail to the gold!

Work was taken up in the fall under the active leadership of Edward Buehrig. The first meeting of the year was given over to a reception and party for the nominal Wrights. Tryouts took place early in the fall term under the direction of committees for the various departments.

Before long the call for contest material was sounded and activities increased. The representatives chosen to compete in the 1929-30 Phil-Wright contest were: John Burlend, Clarence Blair, debate; Ethelynn Billingsley, voice; Lorraine Fredericks, piano; Ruth Walker, oration; Cleda Nitzel, declamation; and Edward Buehrig, extemporaneous speaking.

The winter term was overflowing with activity with Burton Carlock as president. At general assembly immediately before Christmas vacation, Wrightonia gave a one-act play, "Why the Chimes Rang," under the direction of Kenneth Turner.

E. Buehrig, B. Carlock, J. Burlend

After Christmas vacation came the contest with all its excitement and work. Wrigtonia won two events—extempore and oration given by Edward Buehrig and Ruth Walker respectively.

During one of the big snows Wrigtonia held a bob-sled party and on February 17 a Valentine Party was given after the regular meeting.

John Burlend was elected president for the spring term and Wrigtonia continued working. With Cleda Nitzel as chairman, the Wrights again put on a stunt in the Varsity Club Stunt Show given on May 9.

Wrigtonia was well represented in the literary contests of the year. Blanche Davis won third place in oration at the Little Nineteen Women's Oratorical Contest. John Burlend won first place in extemporaneous speaking in the Livingston Cup Contest and second place in the State Teachers' College Oratorical meet. Dorothy Ellis and Mildred Isenhower represented the Wrights on the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Squad while John Burlend and Edward Buehrig debated in the Men's Intercollegiate group. Of the delegates to the Pi Kappa Delta convention at Wichita, Kansas, the purple and gold sent five: Dorothy Ellis, Mildred Isenhower, Women's debating; Blanche Davis, Women's oration; Edward Buehrig, extemporaneous speaking; and John Burlend, Men's debate.

Prof. C. A. Harper as our new sponsor this year deserves a great deal of credit for Wrigtonia's successes.

PI KAPPA DELTA

Pi Kappa Delta is a national honorary forensic fraternity. There are now one hundred and thirty-six chapters in the United States.

The 1929 Homecoming banquet was held at the Y. W. C. S. in Bloomington. More than thirty active and alumni members were present.

The past year has been unusually successful for members of Pi Kappa Delta. Able Hanson won first in the state teachers' college oratorical contest and third in the inter-state teachers' college contest. Clarence Miller won first in the state teachers' college contest in reading and John Burlend won second in extempore speaking. Atwood Reynolds and Blanche Davis each won third in the Little Nineteen Oratorical Contest.

The men's debate team won the teachers college championship of Illinois and the women's tied with Shurtleff College for the state championship.

Eight delegates, Abel Hanson, John Burlend, Atwood Reynolds, Margaret Hiett, Blanche Davis, Mildred Isenhower, and Dorothy Ellis participated in the national forensic contests of Pi Kappa Delta held at Wichita, Kansas, March 31 to April 4. The men's debate team survived seven rounds of the national tournament.

Dr. Malmbery accompanied the group to Wichita, and he deserves much credit for the success of both the group that went to Wichita and the organization.

Gamma Theta Upsilon is a professional Geography Fraternity, founded at Illinois State Normal University in May, 1928. The purposes of the organization are three-fold:

1. To promote interest in geographical activities not received in regular class-room work.
2. To create a loan fund for graduate study in geography.
3. To place trained geographers in teaching positions.

Among the programs that we had this year are, a talk on Denmark by Miss Field; a talk on South America by Mr. Arnillas, a student from Peru; a report on the meeting of the national council of geographers held in December at Columbus, Ohio, by Mr. Buzzard; and Mr. Aldrich on Anthropological studies in France.

At a joint meeting with the Science Club Miss Crompton told us about her field trip in the Peace River Valley in Canada last summer with graduate students from the University of Chicago.

Many of our alumni attended the Homecoming banquet Saturday evening, October 19, 1930. Interest in Gamma Theta Upsilon is spreading to other schools, and it is hoped that it will become a national fraternity.

Pi Omega Pi is a national honorary commercial fraternity. Its purpose is to promote intelligent and enthusiastic interest in the world of commerce and to foster ideals of service in the teaching profession.

Addresses by successful business men, initiations, and parties have given both benefit and entertainment to the members of the fraternity during the past year. Theta chapter was well represented at the national convention of Pi Omega Pi which was held in Chicago during the Christmas vacation. At that time Frank Drendel, an alumnus of the Theta chapter, was elected national historian.

Active members of the local chapter are: Ralph Boyd, Doris Harper, Everette Haag, Ruth Nelson, Edith Shakespeare, Melvina Way, Marion Horn, Ruth Lee, Adaline Stevenson, Almalee Puckett, Lena Van Etten, Hattie Heinhorst, Merne Compton, Dorothy McHenry, Miss Ferne Melrose, Miss Elsie Brenneman, Miss Jane Church, Miss Alta Day, Miss Irene Johnson, Mr. Harry Admire, and Mr. Arthur Williams.

Theta Alpha Phi is the only national honorary dramatic fraternity on the campus. Membership into Theta Alpha Phi is the highest honor that the college actor can attain. The requirement for membership of the Delta Chapter is participator in three dramatic productions—in acting and in some other field of dramatic work. In addition to these requirements, quality of work is seriously considered.

This year the local chapter sponsored the first play-writing contest giving a ten-dollar prize for the best one-act play submitted and another ten-dollar prize for the best original dramatization submitted. This contest is to be a permanent part of the program. In addition to this, Theta Alpha Phi joined with the Jesters in giving three after-play receptions. A one-act play was produced before the general assembly

The regular initiation took place in the late spring, when a banquet was given for active, honorary, and alumni members.

Miss Mabel Allen, the sponsor of Delta Chapter deserves a great deal of credit for her work.

THE APPORTIONMENT BOARD

The duties of this committee are to analyze the requests from the various student organizations for funds and to apportion such funds to these organizations from the student activity fund. The board is composed of a sub-committee from the faculty committee on student activities assisted by two representatives elected from the student body and one student representative from the University High School. This organization is headed by President Felmley and later by acting President Dean Schroeder, chairman; Dr. Buzzard and Adams of the faculty, Ruth Parrish and Carroll Cade, student representatives, and Irene Siren of the University High School.

The apportionments this year were made on the basis of a budget drawn up by finding the average percentage of apportionments to each organization for the last four years. This budget was worked out by President Felmley and adopted by the board early in the fall. The problem of fitting apportionments to requests was reduced to a minimum by this budget as each apportionment had to be reduced proportionately since the diminishing enrollment had decreased the student activity fund. The board is confident that this is the fairest method of dealing with the problem of diminishing enrollment which has been facing them for the last few years.

LECTURE BOARD

The lecture board of 1929-1930 consisted of the following members:

From the Faculty:

Miss Edith I. Atkin.

Mr. R. H. Linkins.

Mr. Harry F. Admire.

From the student body:

Miss Hazel Sutherland.

Mr. Abel Hanson.

The debating season has been most successful. The men's debating team won the Little Nineteen championship and the women's debating team tied with Shurtleff for first honors.

I. S. N. U. was represented at the Pi Kappa Delta national convention at Wichita, Kansas, by an enthusiastic group of eight: Abel Hanson, John Burlend, Mildred Isenhower, Dorothy Ellis, Margaret Hiatt, Edward Buehrig, Atwood Reynolds, and Blanche Davis.

The Board is composed of three student members, Alice Peterson, Thomas Barton, and Kenneth Turner, and three faculty members, Miss Mabel Allen, Mr. Fred S. Sorrenson, and Mr. W. A. L. Beyer.

JESTERS

The Ancient and Honorable Organization of Jesters exists for the purpose of promoting dramatics and producing better plays at I. S. N. U. This year the Jesters in co-operation with OAQ produced "Outward Bound," by Sutton Vane, one of the best plays amateurs could present.

Membership in this society depends upon talent in acting, if the person takes part in the play itself or upon skillful manipulation of stage properties and execution of duties if on the stage crew or executive staff.

The organization has been active since 1913. The membership has been small this year as compared to previous years. Nevertheless the year has been a successful one. Jesters have been well represented in the casts of all the plays given this year. At the regular meetings, one act plays were given, one of which was presented to the student body during General Exercise period. Another was presented at the sophomore meeting near the end of the winter term. The organization remains active.

The jesters owe their success largely to their sponsor, Miss Helen Bryant.

Fall Term	Winter Term	Spring Term
President— Carroll Cade	Byron Hallam	Paul Koehler
Vice-President—	Duane Arbogast	George Carpenter
Secretary-Treasurer— Harry Coursey

Mr. Packard, a new member of our faculty, was chosen as our sponsor. Before Mr. Packard became our sponsor the membership in the club was small. Within two weeks we had a membership of twenty. Mr. Packard has been very influential in our work the past year.

In our debate with the women in the fall term we won a unanimous decision. The question debated was, Resolved, that the state of Illinois should enact legislation to provide for life sentence for fourth offenders of any one major crime such as in the case of New York and Michigan. The men debators were: Rudolph Schwartz and George Carpenter who upheld the affirmative side of the question.

The winter term we did not fare so well against the fairer sex. Our debate was held as an exhibition debate at Stanford High School. Our two debators, Hallam and Cade lost a unanimous decision to the women. The question was, Resolved, that the state of Illinois should enact legislation providing for compulsory automobile liability insurance.

The question for the spring term debate was, Resolved, that the eighteenth amendment be modified so as to permit the sale of light wines and beers up to four per cent. We shall uphold the negative of this question.

This past year has been both profitable and enjoyable for the members of the Women's Debate Club. Each Tuesday night some question of national, state or local importance as well as the advisability of various reforms in the I. S. N. U. were debated.

The Club's stunt, "Hobo Heaven," won first prize in the Homecoming parade.

Each term representatives of the club met a team from the Men's Debate Club. Late in November, Dorothy Ellis and Audrey Hill in a debate before general assembly upheld the negative side of the questions: "Resolved, that the State of Illinois should enact legislation to provide for life imprisonment for the fourth offenders of any one major offense, such as in the states of Michigan and New York," against two representatives of the Men's Debate Club. The decision was given to the men. In the latter part of February Pauline Grady and Ruth Jury upheld the affirmative against two members of the Men's Club at Stanford High School. The question was, "Resolved, that the State of Illinois should enact compulsory liability automobile insurance." The girls were given the decision.

Miss Vinson with her sympathy and help deserves much of the credit for the success of the year's work.

EUCLIDEAN CIRCLE

Circumscribed Polygon -----	Prof. C. N. Mills

The Euclidean Circle was organized December 14, 1927. It consists of the faculty members of the mathematics department and such students that maintain an average of eighty in three mathematical subjects. Regular meetings are held at seven o'clock Thursday evening of the third, seventh and eleventh weeks. New members are elected each term.

It is the purpose of the organization to bring before its members topics which are not taught in the regular curriculum of the school and to create interest in mathematical study. Then, too, there are many benefits derived from the social and professional contacts with those especially interested in mathematics.

On October 19, the members and alumni of the Euclidean Circle met at the Campus Inn for the Second Annual Homecoming Breakfast. The opening social event was sponsored by Professor and Mrs. C. N. Mills. A Christmas party was given by John Corrington and an Easter party by the girls of the club, at the home of Ethel Taylor.

During the year Professor C. N. Mills gave a resume of his year of advanced work at the University of Michigan and Miss Edith Atkin gave a talk on Ahme's Papyrus, which is an account of early Egyptian Calculations.

The Illinois State Normal University was one of the first schools to recognize Nature Study work, and in 1914 the Nature Study Club was organized to create an appreciation for nature and to keep the members in close contact with the advancements of the world of nature.

Meetings are held on the third, seventh, and eleventh Tuesdays of each term. During the year the membership of the club has been about fifty. Although the club has felt the absence of the long supervision of Miss Patterson, it has been very successful this year because of the co-operation of the members and the assistance of the sponsors.

The work of the club began with the participation in Homecoming and has continued with many interesting and helpful programs during the year.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

 Vice-President -----Naomi Murphy
 Secretary-Treasurer -----Mary Allen
 Sponsor -----Miss Rambo

The first meeting of the Home Economics Club this year was welcoming party for the Freshman women. The club took part in the Hobo Parade. The club held a Homecoming banquet in the dining room for the active and alumni members. There were some eighty that attended the banquet, about half of this number were alumni.

Several faculty members talked to the club throughout the year.

Miss Mabel Allen addressed the club on the topic of "The Relation of Home Economics to Drama."

Miss Marion Allen talked to the club about "The Relation of Art to the Home Economics Department."

Professor Palmer addressed the club on April 3, his topic was "Rambles Through the Orient."

On March 19 the club held an open meeting at Fell Hall and that time presented a style show. On May 1, the Freshman girls entertained the club at the home of their sponsor, Miss Albright.

The club owes a great deal of credit for its success this year to its officers and to its sponsor, Miss Rambo.

Farmers? Yes, indeed, and proud of it! We're not the sort of farmers who would let their chin whiskers grow because it's too much work for them to shave them off. No, sir! We believe in giving our suspenders another hitch and then jump in and do something. If you don't believe me, just look over our past record for this year.

To start with, we had a membership of thirty or so to begin the year.

The Hobo Parade, sponsored by us, was again a big success.

Our judging contests for high school brought the usual large gatherings from nearby towns.

The second Annual I. S. N. U. Corn Show, the child of the Hieronymus Club and ourselves, put another notch in our pitchfork of successes.

We received a ribbon from Chicago for placing in the corn division of the exposition held there.

And, lastly, we wound up the year with our annual "shindig" in the hay loft of the old barn.

Now I ask you—are we "farmers" or FARMERS?

The year 1929-30 has been a successful one for Hieronymus Club, known as one of the most wide-awake and energetic organizations on the campus.

Hieronymus Club took part in the Hobo Parade, carrying out the idea of Hobo "Brew," "Stew," and "Crew." A Homecoming breakfast was held at the Villa in Bloomington which many members and alumni attended.

On October 21, Hieronymus gave a luncheon in honor of Miss Mabel Carney, who was then on the campus for a short time. A Christmas party was held December 18, in room 12. Dr. Hieronymus was the guest of honor at an informal dinner at Fell Hall at six o'clock and at the party later in the evening.

On March 7, Hieronymus Club presented in Capen Auditorium the play "The Torchbearers," by George Kelly. The play was directed by Mrs. Katherine Hawthorne Welsh, a member of the club.

It has been the custom of the Club to secure a speaker of nation-wide reputation to speak in General Assembly. This year we are anticipating securing either S. W. Thompson or Ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden.

The Aim of Hieronymus Club is to study conditions of community life in small communities and to interest men and women students of the institution in the problems of the small community.

MANUAL ARTS CLUB

President -----	Harold Schen
Vice-President -----	Arthur Benscoter
Secretary-Treasurer -----	Waldo E. Frohardt
Sponsor -----	Mr. A. C. Newell

The Manual Arts Club is composed of boys particularly interested in the field of Industrial Arts. Through this organization it is intended that the boys become better acquainted socially, and in this way develop a more general interest in the Industrial Art Department.

The club perhaps has not been as active, from a casual survey of the year's program, as in former years. However, at the beginning of the year ten students were initiated and accepted into the club, making a total membership of twenty-seven. A unique idea was introduced in the Homecoming Parade in the form of a huge rip-saw, made by students in the shop, on which was printed "Rip Carbondale." The Manual Arts Club Basketball team made a favorable showing in the Intra-Mural League.

The Home Coming meant much to us. We were a real group of Hoboes in the Parade. Josephine McClure and Virginia Good won first prize for the best Hobo stunt. 210 Normal Ave., the home of five of our members, received first prize for the best decorated home. 203 N. University, the home of another member, received honorable mention. The Luncheon was held at the Village Inn.

With Hallowe'en came a party for us at the home of Margaret Bloom, 404 Broadway.

The Annual Costume Dance expressed itself in the form of a Pirate Dance held in the Old Castle, January 11. Probably our greatest achievement during the winter term was the organization of a Life Class, that meets every Monday night.

The purpose of the Latin Club is to promote interest in the study of Latin and to provide a common meeting grounds for those interested in classical studies.

The Club met in the home of Hazel Sutherland early in the year to have a social good time and to elect officers. This year, the two thousandth anniversary of the birth of Vergil, who was born in 70 B. C. is being celebrated all over the world, and the Latin Club, in honor of this occasion, has been presenting programs relating to Vergil. Owing to the fact that the club had this definite objective to be carried out, this year's meetings have been most interesting. At the time of the December meeting, Clarence Burner entertained the members of the club at his home with a Christmas party.

The cooperation of the members and the efforts of Miss Carver, our faithful sponsor, has made this year a very successful one.

The Kindergarten Club, consisting this year of ninety members, is made up of the faculty and students of the Kindergarten Department. The object of the Club is to promote social relationships and to discuss problems which relate to the education of young children.

Several social events were held during the year including an initiation party, a Christmas program, a Valentine party, a Spring picnic and a banquet given by the Freshmen honoring the Sophomores, now have completed their course.

Throughout the year the Club has participated in the activities of the school. "The Evolution of Hoboes," won second place in the Homecoming parade. The Homecoming Luncheon was enjoyed by one hundred twenty-five active members and alumni. On January 13, the Club presented a program in General Assembly. The Club sponsored, on May 10, an all-school Fairyland Dance in the Old Castle.

At the regular monthly meetings several interesting talks were given by members of the faculty. Miss Mabel Allen spoke on "Dramatization for Young Children," Miss

Marguerite Field told of the play-life of children in Denmark, and Miss Jennie Whitten spoke on "Everyday Courtesies."

In March, Miss Bess Hayden, Primary Supervisor of the Bloomington Public Schools, made an interesting talk to which the Primary Teachers' Club was invited.

Miss Lee gave an interesting account of the meeting of the International Kindergarten Union which she attended in Memphis, Tenn.

Much credit for the success of the year is due to the efforts of our sponsor, Miss Koehring, and to Miss Lee.

PRIMARY TEACHERS' CLUB

The Primary Teachers' Club was organized during the fall term of 1924, with a charter membership of thirty-one.

The object of the club is to associate more closely those whose professional interests are the same, and to promote and encourage professional and social interests of the girls in the Lower-Grade Curriculum, B, or those who are especially interested in Primary Work.

It has been the practice of the club, during the past year, to meet on the first Tuesday of each month. A short business meeting is followed by a program in which various faculty members frequently take part. (At one of these meetings Miss Agnes Rice talked on The Activity Program in the Primary Grades. At another meeting Mrs. Royce discussed projects in the second grade. Mrs. Anderson spoke on The Use of Posters for Beginners.)

In the early fall a get-acquainted party welcomes the new members. At Homecoming the club takes an active part in the Hobo Parade and also entertains the alumni members with a Homecoming luncheon. It is customary for the club to have a banquet during the spring term. (Miss Esther Foster of Oak Park, Illinois, spoke on The Growing Teacher at the last annual banquet.)

Throughout the entire activity of the club Miss Eystone has been its able sponsor, and the club members feel greatly indebted to her for the club's success. "If you would have your name written in the hearts of men, then serve them gladly," seems to be the spirit in which Miss Eystone serves the club.

The Commerce Club has, for several years, been one of the largest organizations on the campus. Nearly every person in Curriculum J becomes a member during his first term at I. S. N. U. This year there are about 80 members.

The purpose of the club is to promote a general feeling of good fellowship, which tends to encourage wider acquaintances among students and teachers. Then, too, there are things to be gained from each meeting which lead to the making of better teachers.

Initiation took place in the late fall, and meetings have been held each month since. Some of our programs have consisted of speeches by prominent business men of Bloomington, which were very interesting and helpful. In January, a joint meeting with Pi Omega Pi was held, at which the meaning of this fraternity and requirements for entrance were discussed by Mr. Boyd, the President.

Much credit is due to our Sponsor, Mr. Williams, who has proved himself a very worthy leader and a friend to each and every member of the club.

ILLINOIS STATE NORMAL UNIVERSITY STUDENT LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

President	Mildred Isenhower
Vice-President	Louise Fulton
Secretary	Secretary
Treasurer	Jean McReynolds
Sponsor	Miss Dexheimer

The Illinois State Normal Student League of Women Voters was organized January, 1929. It sent four delegates to the convention of the State League of Women Voters with which it became affiliated last year. The local league is the largest student league in the state, with a membership of fifty-two women students, who are vitally interested in governmental affairs, local, national and international.

Every woman in school who is interested in citizenship work is eligible to belong. Meetings are held three times a term at which talks on topics of current interest are given and discussed by the group.

The League held its first social event March 6, when a "Get Acquainted" party was given. It is hoped that many of the members are returning to school next Fall to carry on the work.

THE PRESS CLUB

The Press Club is the newest organization on the campus. It was organized February 20, 1930, with the following officers:

President—Campbell Miller.

Vice-President—Dorothy Ellis.

Secretary-Treasurer—Nellie Davis.

Student Council Representative—Blanche Davis.

The purposes of the Press Club are: To keep alive and promote interest in journalistic work, to study development and trends in school journalism from the standpoint of the prospective teacher, to encourage high standards in school publications on the I. S. N. U. campus.

The members of the club are composed of those students who have earned a credit in journalism here or its equivalent elsewhere, and students who have worked on the staff of the Vidette for at least one term.

The sponsor for the organization is Miss Ester Vinson, the teacher of journalism.

In order that the Catholic students and faculty members of the Illinois State Normal University might be brought together into a closer social relationship, the Newman Club was founded in December, 1923. This club was named in honor of the famous Cardinal Newman, Catholic writer, scholar and priest.

The members meet the second, sixth and tenth Thursday of each term for a business meeting, following by a program and a social hour. The three big events of the year are the Homecoming breakfast, the Christmas party, and the St. Patrick's day breakfast.

During this school year there has been a great deal of interest shown in the Newman Club by many of its members and the alumni.

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA

The orchestra of 1929-30, composed of 28 members has as its new director Mr. Kenyon S. Fletcher. Under his capable direction practices were held every Wednesday evening in the music room on the third floor of "Old Main."

The orchestra made its first public appearance at the Homecoming Play. At Christmas time and again in April the orchestra gave a program in General Exercises. Three joint concerts were given during the year with the Choral Club. The last one known as the Sacred Concert was presented the Sunday evening before graduation.

The orchestra completed a very successful year by playing for "Outward Bound," the Stunt Show and the Spring Festival.

Memories

And now that the last book has been chucked away; the last dance waltzed into the past; and the grip already packed for the push-off for home, might it not be worthwhile to pause in our mad rush and survey those things which are shelved away as memories? Many things have been done; many have been left undone. Many things have been learned; many forgotten. Many good times have been had, and many unpleasant experiences. Old friendships have been renewed and soldered together for life; new friendships have been made and bonds of good feeling tied with the sinews of sincerity. Sweethearts have been won and happiness insured; others have been lost and loneliness ensues.

It's been a year of life—college life—a life different from that found in the everyday world—a year, which if well spent, will mean more every decade; but if not so spent, means just another year.

It's been a year of association with fellow students, with professors, and with books. It's been a year of give and take, with the odds oftentimes being pitted against you. It's been a year of "finishing and polishing up" for the senior; while at the same time it has been a year of adjustment for the freshman.

But it has been a great year for even the most indifferent student, and as the days round into months, the months into years, and the years into lifetime, your happiest hours may be spent in reviewing those outstanding moments spent at I. S. N. U. Many of the recollections will be happy ones; many of them will be touched with blues. But may it not be said that the happiest hours are the ones that bear a tinge of sadness in your heart?

You'll recall those moments when you were highly self-conscious—when you felt like a penny expecting change—when your hands seemed like feet, and your feet like boxes; when your vocal organs seemed to have declared a strike in general. You'll recall those times when prof intentionally asked you questions on the day after a big date the night before, and you find yourself stammering and blustering, totally unable to even bluff. You'll remember how he bawled you out before your fellow members, whose esteem you desired. Of course he had never been in such predicaments, for he had always been an honor student, so of course he couldn't understand your situation. He couldn't understand how any one person could be so dumb.

You'll remember how boresome general exercises were to you, and how troublesome it was to get excuses when you did "cut." Some of those songs which you warbled time and again on maybe "blue Monday" or on Thursday, or what is it, you'll long be able to sing, supplying the two and three part accompaniments by yourself.

You'll ne'er forget those dear old rhetoricals. When bigger and better speakers are made, I. S. N. U. will do it, and with pride you'll point to the foundation received in those little rhetorical classes, where if you were onto the ropes of the institution you would give the same rhetorical throughout your college career with nary a change.

You may remember those high 'falutin' vocalists and instrumentalists, to hear whom you paid huge sums of money through student activities fees, but because you do not appreciate classical music and entertainers, and that through no fault of your own, you remained away on those evenings, in order that Bloomington patrons might have better seats. You may remember these entertainments, and then use your influence to see to it that the coming collegians are not required to see their money spent for those things they do not choose to have.

You'll remember the athletic contests staged in the various seasons, some of them thrilling and victorious, others contrary. And the forensic contests will long remain cherished memories.

You'll recall those campus affairs, and how they troubled your mind, and usually at a time when clear thinking was in demand. You'll recall those moonlight evenings when you strolled about the campus, sometimes with company and again alone. You'll remember how "some other guy was always trying to date your girl," etc. Yes, you'll remember all these things in the section placed in your memories as college life.

So away from the University—away from Normal. Off for the South, East or West. Off for Home. Yes, lucky fellow—Home, where the bitterest sorrows are but trifles. Home, the palace of every man's happiness. Home to that front porch from which we started on this trip through dreamy memory-land. And now your guide, Atwood Reynolds, bids you "Good luck" till we meet again.

P. S.—A few more good-byes and it'll be over, pal. Over forever for you, but for me, one more year. It's been wonderful, hasn't it? I know it hurts to think that these college days are now but mere flowers for your garden of memories. But, they are flowers that will bloom forever. Buck up, old scout, you've done your bit and we're proud of you.

And you, old timer, will be back for your third year, and you for your second? Great! We'll expect big things of you. Go about your work with earnestness, but not too seriously. Study when it's time to study, but don't sacrifice your health. Remember the Lord gave you but one body, and you are the keeper. Prescribe for yourself a program that will keep you balanced physically, mentally and socially.

Take your instructors for what they are worth, no more and no less. They're all good scouts, but remember that their chief aim is to wake up and not make up your mind. Take life as it comes, and think nothing of it. At times you'll find school dark, dreary and gloomy, but remember, that after the rain—then comes the sun. Be patient when things displease you. True, at times we get highly vexed and out of sorts, but remember Rome was not built in a day, and so let's stand by, for our chance or turn may come next. And I pass on to you from a grad who gave it to me, this tip, "Respect the administration if it respects you."

Well, pal, we leave. Would that we could be together always; but that is not life. Maybe we'll meet again; maybe not. Maybe we'll remember; maybe not. No promises. That's life's way.

Many things I'd like to say that should be said; many that should not be said. But it's too late. I didn't realize what our parting would mean. I didn't know what a true friend you were. But I do now. You'll never know all I'm thinking; you'll never guess. I can only in simple sincerity say "I'll miss you a lot."

And so,

When you're lounging about on your own front porch,

In the hush of those midsummer eves,

When the calm that follows the close of school

The collegiate—you can no longer please;

When you're troubled with blues and lonesomeness

And you long for I. S. N. U.

Why not command your troubles, "Retreat!"

And with memories have a rendezvous?

September 14

Attention: Four hundred Freshmen, green and awkward, tip-toe their way through registration routine on this day of Freshman registration, the first orientation week to be held for the yearlings in the history of I. S. N. U.

September 16

Three hundred and fifty more said youngsters trek through the registration rig-a-ma-role. Ha! Then the big Freshman party, with girls lined up on one side of the gymnasium and boys on the other. How meek they are; but what a change will come over them as the year progresses.

September 17

At last they arrive, and you can tell by their intelligent looks that they are upperclassmen. There's a sophomore. You can always tell him—but you can't tell him much. There's a junior, happy in his ignorance, happy in his knowledge, happy all the time. And over there against the wall stands a senior. He knows what it's all about, and glances upon the others with an air of sympathy, and kindness.

September 20

Upperclassman party; strictly so. Why does everyone crowd about that punch-bowl? Why don't they have dancing at these parties? Look out! If that Prof. corners you, you'll be talking to her until we leave. Come on, I can't wear this smile all evening, 'cause they're sure to get onto me.

September 26

Kids once again at the Kindergarten Kid party—all fixed up with baby-blue eyes, pig-tailed hair and all-day suckers.

October 3

Just have to be initiated when joining any order, and so it is with the W. A. A. Why is it that these neophytes wear such haggard looks the next day?

October 11

Hurray! The first social action of the season that really embraces the whole school. Varsity Club and Women's League break down and tempt everyone with an all-school party.

October 17

Put on your sweaters, mufflers and mittens, for we're goin' to a snake dance. Over the campus, up to Fell Hall, then down through town, with the clamor of street-car bells urging us on. Let's take possession of the confectioneries! Huh?

October 18

I looked for it; you looked for it, and they looked for it. HOME-COMING!! Breakfasts, dinners, football, plays, and delightful dances, with peoples and peoples idling about long into the quiet dreamy night.

October 19

Not one day of good old get-togethers, but two. How that band could play for that dance. Yes, it was a good time for you and me; but a glorious time for those old grads.

October 21

Back to the grind; books, classes, instructors, bells—well it's school all over again, and nothing else now until Thanksgiving Day.

November 2

Fell Hall's entertaining with their Autumn dance. Can't miss that. They're good entertainers, those girls are. Lovely evening; keen orchestra; considerate chaperones. Gosh, it's college life—wouldn't give it up for anythin'.

November 14

Couldn't that Boston Women's Symphony really make those instruments talk? Wonder what became of the hundreds that couldn't get into the entertainment, including students, who had paid their term fees?

November 16

No term is complete without the Varsity club term dance, and with this in view the club entertained with their Fall dance. No kicks heard, so everybody's happy.

November 27

Onto the shelves with the books; into the grips with your duds, for we're leavin' on that first train out for some of dear old mother's Thanksgiving dinner.

December 2

Can't we ever have a vacation without having to trudge back to the old grind through snow?

December 7

Varsity Club post-exam dance. How happy and care-free everyone appears. Never mind, ol' top, you'll change that expression when you hear those bells chime in the new term next Monday.

December 9

Back to the class room. Everybody happy? What matter, we're after an eddycation.

December 13

The Seniors apologetically become exclusive and entertain themselves with a class party. O. K. with us Seniors, our turn's coming.

December 14

Women's League Feature dance. For all we know it was a wonder dance, for we left wondering what the feature was.

December 15

When it comes to sponsoring impressive Xmas programs, you'll look far and wide before you'll find any better than the Varsity club.

December 20

Get me my grip, my hat and my coat, for I'm headed north on that first train, and I'm not coming back here until the last train leaves home on New Year's day. Good eats, good sleep, and lots of—whoopee!

January 7

In Venice you'll hear them sing, "There's Water on the Highways," but in Illinois at the end of Xmas vacation you may always hear them grumble "There's snow drifts on the highway." Well, what's a few hundred miles of snow drifts in the face of a college education?

January 23

During the greater part of the month of January, the university paused in its social and extra-curricular activities in tribute to the serious illness of our President, Dr. David Felmley. With spirit unwavering and flesh weakening, our leader carried on much of his work for the past year, and when hovering Death grasped him from us, faculty and students joined in mourning the passing of one of the great educators of the nation.

January 26

With touching words from the lips of Dr. Hieronymus, Dr. Lord, Francis G. Blair, and Mr. Whitten, final tribute, impressive in its simplicity, was paid to Dr. Felmley in Capen auditorium, where during his regime he had presided over thousands of general assembly meetings. With heads bared in the fast falling snow, the student body stood guard as the funeral cortege wended its way from the campus.

January 31

A packed auditorium attended the literary classic of the year—the Phil-Wright contest. Of course, the Phils won, but it was a real hot contest.

February 1

Poor Wesleyan! How bitter she must feel under sting of that 24-21 beating. Bad enough that she should have only beaten us by one point a week ago. But, oh, how morbid she must feel tonight.

February 14

Yours truly and Blanche Davis did garner two third places in the Illinois Intercollegiate Oratory contest.

February 15

Punch, women and music, and you have the Varsity club winter term dance setting given to you in brief. "Nice time," someone comments. "Yes, indeed," somebody else acquiesces, and we'll take their word for it.

February 19

Say can't that Phil LaFollette really tell you the things he wants to tell you in the way you want to hear them? Would that our lecture courses could produce more like it.

February 21

Not to be outdone by the Seniors, the Juniors take it upon themselves to withdraw from the regular run of college society to have a brief class sojourn of their own. And maybe you think that punch wasn't good.

February 22

Say, lad, if you expect to rate this Fell Hall dance this winter, you'd just better advertise the fact that you're willing to rent a Tux, 'cause I'm tellin' ya yo're goin' to need one. Patent leather shoes, silk lapels, winged collars, greased hair, an unnatural feeling—and Fell Hall entertains. Joking aside, it was an eventful affair, impressive and highly pleasant. May the Fell Hall spirit, which prompted it, carry on!

February 23

Faculty has party in Fell Hall. Can't you just see our instructors raising whoopee. Don't smile, my lad, I believe they'd fool you.

March 8

The Primary Teachers' Club comes to the fore and entertains with an all-school party. Good time! 'Nuff sed.

March 15

Varsity club entertains with an all-school party. No one was found drunk, and no one trying to get that way.

March 17

Up with the rising sun, and hustled over to the campus lest everyone and his brother and sister get to school to register before me. Found corridors chucked full of persons. Politely doffed my hat to ladies and pros as I b'azed by them. Found it not uncommon to run across men students looking over the crop of eligible women.

March 18

Tie into those studies, young fellow, for it won't be long and that spring atmosphere will turn those fancies to lighter veins.

March 24

What could be more bitter than a debate team taking its only defeat of the season (and that at the hands of Wheaton) and then find itself snowbound in Joliet in attempt to get back to morning classes at I. S. N. U. And I prithee, why should Abe Hanson and Tom Barton connive against me that I should have to toddle home with Dr. Sorrneon, while they remained over night in Joliet to entertain those two pretty waitresses?

March 28

Who'll ever forget Dr. Malmberg playing on the faculty basketball team against the P. E. intramural team? Say and what did you think of Horton's playing? Not bad for an old man, was it?

March 29

What a lot of hot air the school got rid of when it sent its debaters and orators to Wichita, Kans. Am still wondering just what kind of an alarm clock Doc Malmberg has, that it should awaken him at 7 instead of 5 a. m.

April 1

Got word in Wichita, Kans., that I. S. N. U. had printed an April

Fool edition of its Vidette. What that Vidette Staff can't do.

April 5

Balloons, informality and hilarity abounded at the Fell Hall spring term dance, so I'm told. Dances with chaperones were at a premium, they tell us, so here's fair warning to you, students—be careful just what chaperones you select.

April 6

Pi Kappa Delta contestants pull into Normal at 10 p. m., elated over the fact that Marge Hiett and Blanche Davis had tumbled headlong into the climactic joke of the trip. Though no medals were brought back a fine showing was made, according to the rankings.

April 7

Philadelphians entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

April 12

Off for the old home town, for 'tis Easter vacation. Sister blossoms out in new hat and dress, and brother displays a new spring suit. Full moon in store for the vacationers, provided no rain interferes. Debaters are less fortunate than rest of students, as they must stay by their posts to defeat Macomb and DeKalb Normal colleges.

April 25

I. S. N. U. baseball team knocks off Illinois college, last year's champs; Abel Hanson cops third place in the Teachers' college oratory meet at DeKalb; W. A. A. holds all-girls' party.

April 26

Normal takes Charleston baseball into camp at Charleston, 16-15.

April 29

Macomb succumbs to Normal's hard-hitting team, 10-5.

May 1

I. S. N. U. baseball team comes from behind to defeat Eureka, 9-3.

May 3

I. S. N. U. baseball team sets record by scoring 17 runs in eighth inning to overcome a 7-run handicap and defeated North Central College, 23-11

Away with your books. Away with your cares; and on with the dance. Varsity club spring dinner-dance at Maplewood country club. A moonlight night; a soft breeze; a polished floor; dreamy waltzes, and the close of the dance dawns only too soon.

May 8

Where are those stump speeches and all that campaign literature, significant of elections? It being the students' will, Buehrig was chosen for Vidette editor; Barton for Index; Maude Collins for Women's League president and yours truly for Student Body president.

May 9

What a break! Faculty puts on stunning stunt in Varsity Club stunt show, but are barred from prize competition.

May 10

Come all ye fairies and point yourselves to the Kindergarten Fairy-land dance.

May 11

To you Mother, the Varsity Club tenders this program; and to you Fell Hall sponsors this tea.

May 17

Ha! Drag out your Tux's, you who are fortunate enough to have them, and the rest of you can rent them. A charming partner in lovely attire and heavenly atmosphere. A bit of Paradise, and you have the Women's League spring formal in true setting. No better times have been had, was the concensus and I vouch for as much.

May 24

Say, fellow, those freshmen are entertaining again. Some class to them, heh? And it's a sport dance. Well that's somethin', don't ya think? More power to them.

May 30

Off to the Varsity Club picnic dinner dance with fair girl friend. Off to get the fourth and last letter for baseball competition, and drag away for self one of them there big N blankets. Same for Aiello, G. Hill and Carlock. Waltzes and fox-trots to one's content kept one out of mischief during the evening.

May 31

All togged up in over-alls, boots and straw hats, did drag our squaws to the Ag. barn dance in the hay loft of the University farm barn. Smell of new mown hay was missing, but all other farm odors were found not missing. Danced to tunes familiar, and light by lantern.

June 6

It's great to be a junior or senior and rate these Junior-Senior proms. It really makes you feel as if you were somebody for an hour or two. But you get that Cinderella effect after leaving, for you realize it was an illusion. But what enjoyment while the affair was in sway. Music in the air, partner in arm, and punch in—the bowl, made one wish school were going to last a month longer. But, nay, three more days and it's over.

June 7

President's reception, the last social event to be tendered the seniors.

June 10

Senior-Sophomore play, "The Piper," in four acts.

June 11

Annual spring dance festival in the I. S. N. U. natural outdoor theater.
